Thank you for being a reviewer

Dear Bharathi Bharathi,

Peer review – and reviewers – are at the heart of the academic publishing process. The exceptional challenges we have all faced during the last two years have reconfirmed the critical importance of peer review. We would like to express our deepest gratitude for volunteering your time and expertise as a reviewer.

Letter from the Elsevier Journals Leadership Team

Saif Shines <saifshine7@gmail.com>

Congratulations on becoming a Campus Editor!

Hi,

I am Nirajita and I'm the associate news editor at LinkedIn overseeing the Campus Editor Programme for India. I wanted to let you know that you've been selected to join the Campus Editor Programme — you'll be our force on the ground helping to bring dynamic student voices to LinkedIn's 500+ million members.

As your institute's Campus Editor, you'll:

- Write and create content on LinkedIn's publishing platform.
- Pitch post ideas and edit the content of your peers.
- Identify great writers on campus and curate the best content your student body has to offer.
- Discover promising writers and unheard student voices, and activate them to publish on LinkedIn.

Here's what you can expect:

- Training on how to best use LinkedIn's publishing platform so that you can share this opportunity with your peers.
- To develop your professional brand and visibility in a way that creates opportunities.
- To hone your writing, editing and leadership skills.
- A free premium upgrade to your LinkedIn account for a year that gives you access to advanced features on LinkedIn, plus a free -- Lynda.com subscription to help acquire new skills and enhance your job prospects.

To kick things off, I want to host a profile and publishing session with all the Campus Editors on Wednesday, February 7, 7:30 PM. Attending this session is required to become a Campus Editor. To attend the session, you just have to click the link below:

But before everything else, reply to this email confirming that you are willing to take on the responsibility.

Finally, I'd encourage you to start publishing fresh posts on LinkedIn using the hashtag #IndiaStudents. You can write something new or cross-post something you've written elsewhere.

Thanks so much and I'll be in touch!
